Performance Technologies Corporation

April 2, 2009

Dayton, OH- New office space.

After 20 years in their location in the North Dayton area, Performance Technologies has moved their Headquarters to Downtown Dayton. Company President, Michael P. Boland considered the overall range of opportunities in front of PTC, as well as the value of providing better service. "The decision to move has increased the energy of the entire organization. We can not only reach our clients more effectively, but the move has enhanced our sense of team," said Senior Consultant Michael Galamb.

The previous office was best known for its intimate, relaxed professional setting. In fact, many executives enjoyed using the space known as the "Treehouse" to host their coaching and strategy planning sessions since it provided a creative escape from their normal environment, thus the Treehouse will still be available to many of those executives who wish to continue to conduct meetings there. However, the tradition, atmosphere and nostalgia of The Barclay Building will provide a productive meeting locality for PTC employees and their clients

The move serves many purposes including a central presence to the clients that Performance Technologies continues to serve. Don Pearson, an Account Executive believes that the move allows clients to have easier access to the entire team from Performance Technologies therefore enhancing their holistic experience. Not only does the new space enhance the clients experience but it also offers a greener solution for Performance Technologies. The company has worked closely with Dayton area provider Interlink to host a green office atmosphere, greatly reducing the ecological footprint of Performance Technologies. Performance Technologies has become greener through virtual communications, less power usage, adequate space, and a central location according to Director of Operations, Sadie Gaster.
